

Joseph K. Adjaye is Professor of Africana Studies at the University of Pittsburgh. His areas of specialization include African history and culture, as well as Caribbean history (slavery, African retentions, maroon history). Adjaye's publications include three books: Diplomacy and Diplomats in 19th Century Asante (1996 [1984]); Time in the Black Experience (1984); and (with Adrienne Andrews) Language, Rhythm, and Sound: Black Popular Cultures into the Twenty-First Century (1997); as well as numerous essays and reviews in History in Africa, The International Journal of African Historical Studies, Journal of Ethnic Studies, American Historical Review, Journal of Black Studies, and African Historical Review. He can be reached at jadjaye+pitt.edu.

Y.M. Alex-Assensoh is Adjunct Professor in the Department of African American & African Diaspora Studies at Indiana University (Bloomington). Her areas of specialization include American politics: popular participation, urban politics, and minority politics.

A.B. Assensoh is Professor of African American & African Diaspora Studies at Indiana University (Bloomington). His research interests include Third World history, European expansionism (colonialism and comparative slavery), African/Black diaspora history, and Third World Militarism. Assensoh's publications include (with Yvette Alex-Assensoh) African Military History and Politics, 1900–Present (2002); African Political Leadership: A Comparative Study of Jomo Kenyatta, Julius K. Nyerere, and Kwame Nkrumah (1998); and Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and America's Quest for Racial Integration (1986). He can be reached at aassenso@indiana.edu.

Thomas C. Buchanan is Assistant Professor of History at the University of Nebraska at Omaha. He is the author of The Slave Mississippi: Adventures of African American Steamboat Workers in Slavery and Freedom (University of North Carolina Press, forthcoming) and has published in such journals as Journal of Urban History and Journal of Social History. He can be reached at thomasbuchanan@mail.unomaha.edu.

David Carey, Jr. is Assistant Professor of History and Women's Studies at the University of Southern Maine. His publications include Our Elders Teach Us: Maya-Kaqchikel Historical Perspectives. Xkib'ij kan qate' qatata' (University of Alabama Press, 2001), Ojer taq tzijob' al kichin ri Kaqchikela' Winaqi' (A History of the Kaqchikel People) (Q'anilsa Ediciones, 2004), and Engendering Mayan History: Mayan Women as Agents and Conduits of the Past, 1870–1970 (Routledge, forthcoming). He can be reached at dcarey@usm.maine.edu.

Rory J. Conces is Assistant Professor of Philosophy, a member of the International Studies faculty at the University of Nebraska at Omaha, and has been the Editor of International Third World Studies Journal and Review since 1994. He is the author of a monograph entitled Blurred Visions: Philosophy, Science, and Ideology in a Troubled World (1997), and has published articles in numerous journals including Studies in East European Thought, Theoria, The Locke Newsletter, Southwest Philosophy Review, Review Journal of Philosophy and Social Science, Acta Analytica, Dijalog, Sociajdemokrat, and International Third World Studies Journal and Review. Currently, his research focuses on ethnic nationalism, selfhood, personal identity, and conflict management; the ethics of intervention; and extreme deontics. He has lectured on applied philosophy at South China Normal University, Zhoushan University, and Hangzhou Teachers College in China. Conces completed a Fulbright teaching and research award at the University of Sarajevo in Bosnia and Herzegovina, as well as presented additional lectures on applied philosophy at universities in Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, and Kosovo, during the Spring term of 2001. He returned to the Balkans during the Summer term of 2003 to lecture on country building and ethnic nationalism, philosophy, and other topics. Conces traveled to Northern Ireland in the Summer of 2004 to conduct a seminar on ethnic nationalism that was sponsored by Queen's University Belfast. He can be contacted at rconces@mail.unomaha.edu.

JoAnn DiGeorgio-Lutz is an Associate Professor of Political Science at Texas A & M University- Commerce. She is also the Director of the University Honors Program. She teaches courses in international relations and comparative politics with an emphasis on both Central America and the Middle East. Her research interests include internal displacement and refugee studies and she is currently compiling data for a comparative study of internal displacement between central America and the Middle East. She can be reached at JoAnn_Lutz@tamu-commerce.edu.

Peter Emerson is the Director of The de Borda Institute, a Northern Ireland-based organization that promotes inclusive voting. His publications include Defining Democracy, Decisions, Elections and Good Governance (2002); From Belfast to the Balkans, Was Democracy Part of the Problem? (2000); Beyond the Tyranny of the Majority (1998); and The Politics of Consensus (1994). He can be reached at pemerson@deborda.org.

Moshe Gershovich is Associate Professor of Middle Eastern history at the University of Nebraska at Omaha. He published French Military Rule in Morocco: Colonialism and Its Consequences (Cass, 2000). His current research concerns the oral history of Moroccan veterans who served in the French army during World War II. He can be reached at mgershovich@mail.unomaha.edu.

Aaron Hale is a Doctoral Candidate in the Department of Political Science, University of Florida. His research interests focus on how forced displacement contributes to environmental degradation and its relationship to political violence. He has previously published with the Journal of the Third World Spectrum and the ITWSJ&R. He can be reached at ahale_1973@yahoo.com.

David T. Jervis is Visiting Assistant Professor of Political Science at Saint Leo University (Florida). His areas of research interest include American foreign policy toward the non-Western world, American initiatives to resolve internal conflicts, and U.S. policy toward South Africa. He has published articles in South African Journal of International Affairs, Journal of Third World Studies, and Pew Case Studies in International Affairs. He can be contacted at jervisdt@yahoo.com.

Ali Kamali is Associate Professor of Sociology at Missouri Western State College. His areas of teaching and research include social stratification and inequality: class, race, and gender; comparative sociology and development (Central Asia and the Middle East); and social psychology. He can be reached at kamali@mwsc.edu.

Paschal B. Kyiiripuo Kyoore is an Associate Professor of French at Gustavus Adolphus College. He specializes in 19th and 20th centuries French literature, and francophone African and Caribbean literatures. His research focuses mainly on Africa and the Caribbean. He is the author of The African and Caribbean Historical Novel in French: A Quest of Identity (Peter Lang, 1996). He is currently doing research on oral tradition among the Dagara people of Ghana and Burkina Faso. He can be reached at paschal@gustavus.edu.

Dale Stover is Professor of Religion and a faculty member of the Native American Studies Program at the University of Nebraska at Omaha, where he teaches courses in Native American religions, world religions, and women in Islam. Stover has published in numerous journals, including Journal of the American Academy of Religion, Journal of Film and Religion, Cross Currents, Sciences Religieuses/Studies in Religion, Andover Newton Quarterly, Bulletin of the Council for the Study of Religion, and North Dakota History. His current research is in the area of Native American studies. He can be reached at dstover@mail.unomaha.edu.

Richard R. Super is Associate Professor of History at Creighton University. Since earning his doctorate at Arizona State University in 1975, Super has pursued teaching and research in twentieth-century Chile, the comparative Americas, and the Dominican Republic during the Trujillo regime. He has also served in a number of administrative capacities at Creighton, most recently as Director of the Montesinos Center for the Study of the Dominican Republic. He can be reached at super@creighton.edu.

